

Project Planning

Charrease Oliver

Topics

USER ANALYSIS

STAKEHOLDER MAPPING

User Analysis

- The users will consist of high school graduates, college students, college administration.
 - Users of the site will want to gain an understanding of how automation could affect the major of their choice.
 - The goal of the user is to make better decisions about what skills to develop early in their educational path.
 - The users will be able to find the major they have selected and find information on that particular topic.
 - The value that the user will gain will be in the information obtained about how to use their talent.
 - The users want the site to be easy to navigate and they don't want it to be wordy. Straight to the point.
 - The users are interested in becoming informed on their major.
 - The users have prior experience with website, this solution will be easy to navigate.
- The users will move through and select the topic of their choice of their intended career path.
 - Users will be between 18 and 55 years old, both male and female from all geographical places.
 - The students who come may be currently be undergraduates or recent graduates. The administrators will be looking at how they can add to the current curriculum.
 - Users will be from all geographic location, wage differences, culture and nationalities
 - Users will be proficient in English. The site will only use the English language.
 - Motivational differences include the fact that some may want immediate answers and others may want answers to help guide them in the future.

Stakeholder Mapping

