

Scenario 3

An outtake on the family tree, would be to have a historic view (perspective?) of how they came to be here in the USA and their journey through the generations. Use the feedback from the polls, quizzes, and news letters to build or correct information in the history. Show migrations from the central family home to current locations (to generate that 'get back to our roots' sensation).

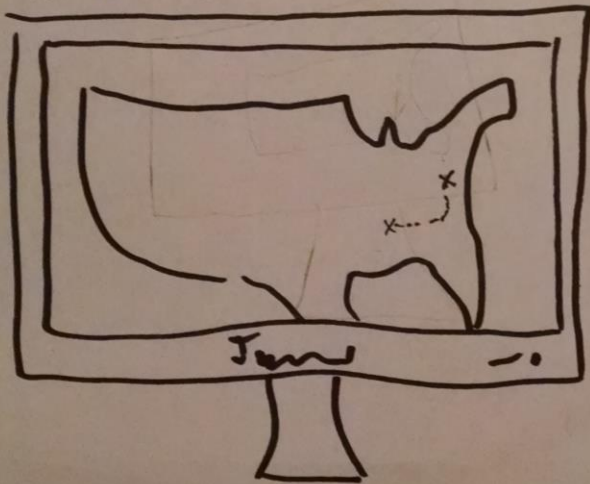

Timmy wanted to know where his great grandparents lived when they were born and when they came to the USA.

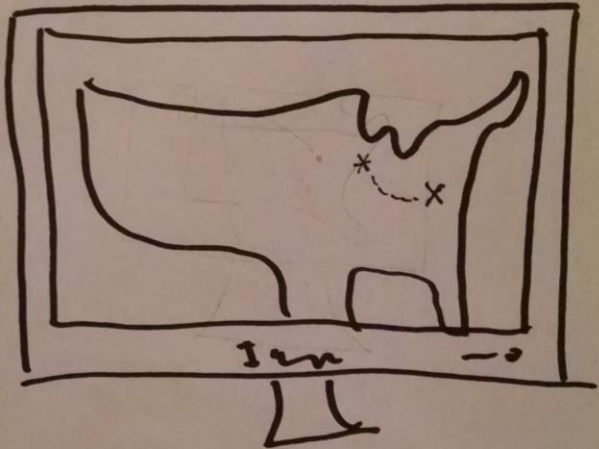

Then he saw where his great uncles had moved to the west coast.

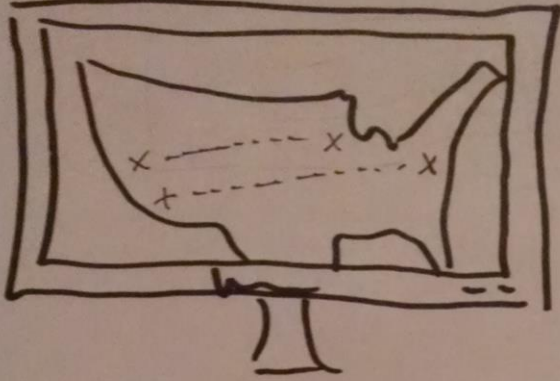

Then he saw where his parents moved to where they now live.

Then he saw where his grandparents had moved before his father was born.

Then he saw where the family had moved to the west with so many other families because of the land

He saw how much the family had moved in recent years compared to when his parents were young.
