

Storyboard

Assignment #2:

Family Reunion Storyboard.

Scenario 1:

Introduce on-line activities to generate interest in getting together, different ways to also gather information about the likes of the family members to make adjustment to the site to draw more awareness and attention (like polls and quizzes). Appeal to the younger audiences while keeping it 'PG'. On-line logs about family activities and such with links to other social media like as Facebook, Instagram, Twitter, and so forth.

1. The children are not interested in going to the family reunion. They would rather stay home or go visit friends. Reunions are where old people sit around and talk.
2. Earlier in the day, the parents were talking to the children about the trip and the new internet site about the reunion. All this while the children were thinking about their own plans for the day hoping the parents would forget.
3. Timmy had forgotten the reunion and was texting his friend, when he remembered something his parents said like reunion and internet in the same sentence.
4. He gets on the internet and searches for the site.

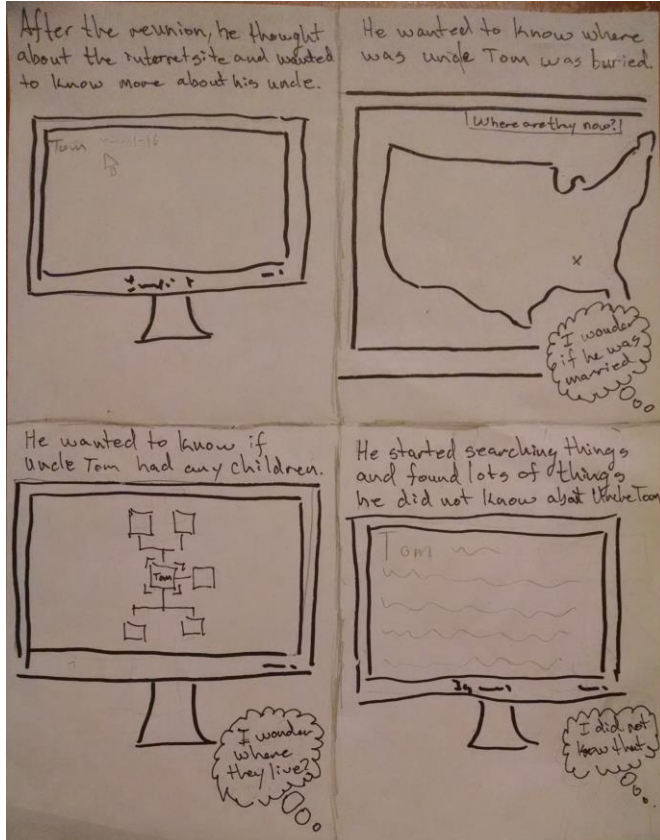

5. When he finds the site, he begins to remember family members he has not seen in a long time. His cousin Benny had moved away and had been gone for many years. He remembers one year Benny came and spent the summer with his family. It was a lot of fun.
6. As he keeps on reading, he learns Benny's parents moved to another country for work and took him with them.
7. He reads another page and learns more. There are some games on the site that are interesting and tickles his curiosity.
8. As he is helping his parent load the car, he tells them everything he has learned about Benny. He cannot wait to see Benny again and learn about his trip to China.

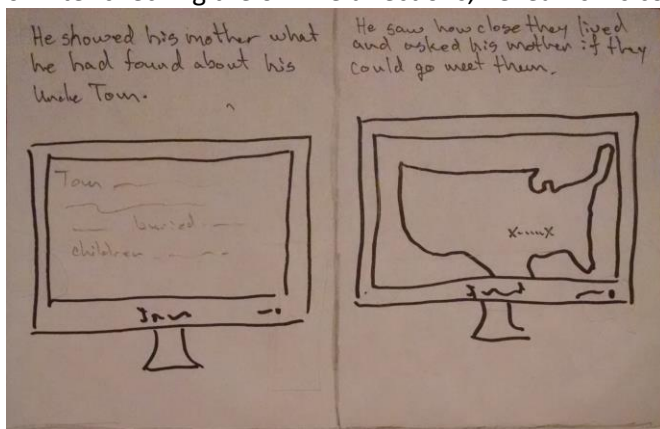

Scenario 2:

Have a memorial page (perhaps with music), showing all the people that have passed and where they are buried. If they have a family cemetery and they would like to include with pictures of that. Also, maybe have a slide show that could be added to it. Another suggestion was made to include a section for newborns. Include the family tree in a 'fixed' format to keep it simple.

1. After the reunion, Timmy wonders about his uncle and checks the family reunion site.
2. He finds where Uncle Tom is buried and wonders if he ever got married.
3. He finds Uncle Tom in the family tree and learns they had two children.
4. As he reads, he learns more about Uncle tom and his family.

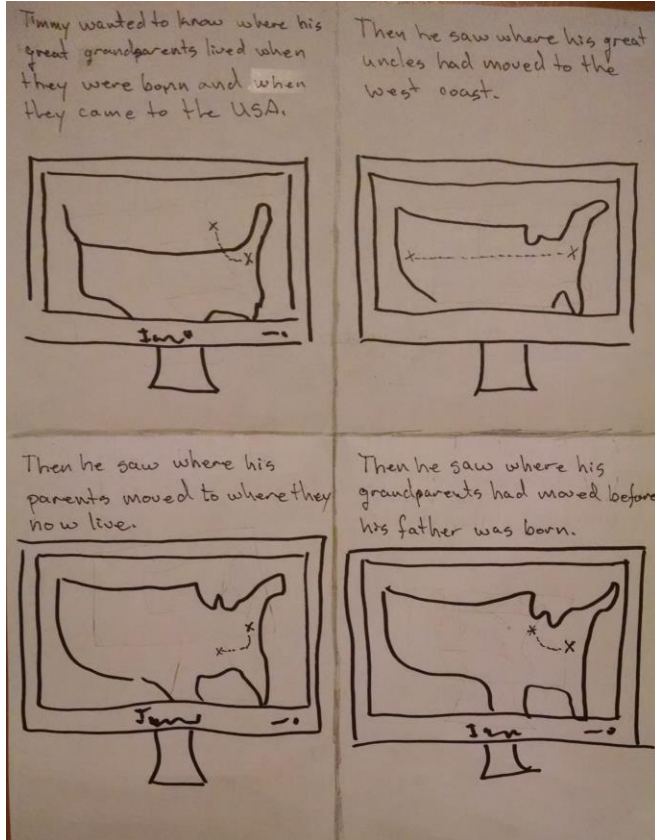

5. Excited, he shows his mother what he has found.
6. After checking the on-line directions, he learns his cousin do not live far away.

Scenario 3:

An outtake on the family tree, would be to have a historic view (perspective?) of how they came to be here in the USA and their journey through the generations. Use the feedback from the polls, quizzes, and news letters to build or correct information in the history. Show migrations from the central family home to current locations (to generate that 'get back to our roots' sensation).

1. Timmy wanted to know where their family had lived when they first came to the USA.
2. He saw after arriving, several followed other families traveling west.
3. He found where his parents had lived before moving to where he was born.
4. His father's parents moved to the city where later met his mother.

5. He did not know why so many families had moved west during that time.
6. Many of his cousins and their families had also moved a great deal in recent years.
