

SportsLink Site Structure

Structuring your website, the right way is crucial for usability. It is important to ensure that your website has a good structure to allow your users to find information easily. Having a good site structure for your website impacts the experience of your visitors. If visitors cannot find information that they are searching for, they will use a different site and will probably never use your site again. Therefore, it is important that you set your site up to help them navigate and find information easily.

There are different types of site structures. The most used structure is the hierarchy structure. The hierarchal structure allows users to see every page available on the website.

SportsLink was created using the hierarchal structure. The main navigation pages are listed in the following order, 'Home, Programs, Coaches, Reviews, About Us and Contact Us.' The 'Home' heading provides a description of what SportsLink and our mission statement. The 'Programs' heading provides a list of all the youth sports programs, and it also gives you the option to search by county. The 'Coaches' tab provides information on how to become a coach and other resources for coaches. The 'Reviews' tab is a list of reviews from parents and players. The last two tabs are self-explanatory. 'About Us and Contact Us' provides FAQs and contact information for SportsLink.
