Which one is better using a template (layout) or without using it

Instructions

1. Make a research about how layouts help the design.

2. Now compare which method is better for you a free form or using a layout and templates

Remember 3 references in APA format. The first posting must be around 150 to 200 words and respond at least 2 times to others classmate

Layouts are fundamental to design and serve many purposes. They enhance visual hierarchy, improve readability, ensure consistency, save time, simplify collaboration, and more. A solid visual hierarchy guides viewers' eyes through the content, making the main elements stand out. Improved readability organizes text and visuals for easier comprehension and aesthetic appeal. Consistency is maintained through layouts, which is crucial for branding and multi-page projects. By providing a predefined structure, layouts save time and reduce the need to start from scratch. Additionally, they simplify collaboration by offering a framework within which team members can work.

An alternative to a layout or template is the free-form approach, which allows unlimited creativity and custom designs. This method is ideal for unique projects that require a personalized touch and can help develop skills in layout creation and design. However, layouts and templates are faster and more efficient for repetitive or time-sensitive tasks. They also ensure consistency, particularly for branding and multi-page projects. Layouts and templates are often the best choice for beginners or those working under constraints. Free forming is excellent, but I like layouts and templates because it makes everything easier.
